How to Read the Call Number

Books are shelved in subject order using the Library of Congress classification system. The first letter(s) in the alphanumeric call number designate the book's major classification. Each subsequent character categorizes the book more specifically.

This means that once you have identified call number areas for a topic, you can use those general areas to find more information on any topic using the Library of Congress system. For example, if you found books on Investing in HG4500's you could find Reference books (such as dictionaries of investment terms) in the HG4500's of the Library's Reference collection.
