

ASIAN LIBRARY

ABOUT THE ASIAN LIBRARY

A distinguished library within The Claremont Colleges Library, the Asian Library has a long history of supporting The Claremont Colleges' curricula and research efforts in the arts & humanities, social sciences, and language studies focused on Asia. Built upon our strength in East Asian rare books, manuscripts, and artifacts, we aim to:

- Strengthen and support the growth of Asian Studies at The Claremont Colleges
- Broaden our collecting efforts to include South, Southeast, and Western Asia, and
- Collaborate with faculty on expanding and improving our instruction and research services, and enhance the access and discovery of our rare book and archival collections.

Special Collections

Among the many rare collections held in the Asian Library are correspondence, manuscripts and historical photos; Buddhist sutras and artifacts; Japanese and Korean maps; Chinese rare books of history, literature, local gazetteers; early Chinese translations of the Bible, western science and technology books. Digital Collections

Some of the Asian Studies special collections have been digitized for online access by users of The Claremont Colleges and beyond. They range from Japanese traditional woodblock prints, Korean rare books, Chinese political posters, to oral history interviews on key figures of the American occupation government in postwar Japan. Artifact Collections

There are several artifact collections at the Asian Library and Special Collections. They are good examples for classes highlighting Asian civilization, history, and material cultures. Visit the AL Artifact page: 7clib.cc/ALArtifact

THE CLAREMONT COLLEGES

LIBRARY

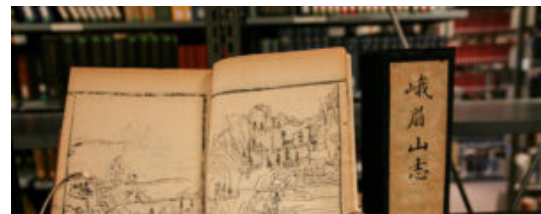

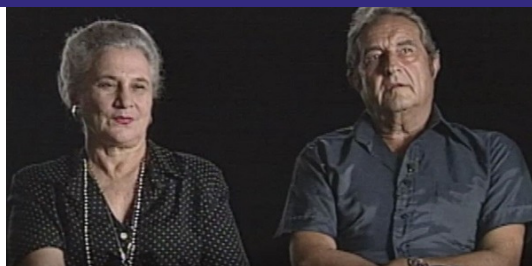

SERVICES

Building on the strengths of our historical collections,

- We acquire new materials in print and digital formats published in and outside of Asia to support faculty's research in Asian studies.
- We collaborate with faculty members to develop assignments that allow students to engage with relevant library materials in their course work, and to host classes where students directly engage with librarians and resources relevant to their course topic.
- We create customized research guides to support research, teaching, and learning in Asian Studies.
